The inaugural speech of Mary Washington's seventh president, William J. Frawley, ought to be heavily borrowed from to explain the nature of this book. While he so aptly spoke of the University's direction during his installation ceremony, his audience gained a fresh perspective. Frawley's central point was that of convergence; of the University connecting today with yesterday and yesterday with tomorrow. "Convergence is at the heart of the university," said Frawley in his address, "Here we harness unbending tradition with the risks of the pedagogical cutting-edge; here we actively promote disagreement, dissent and divergent thinking, all the while tempering it with respect, balance and a sense of others." There's simply no better way to put it. The University merges life with academics, science with religion and tradition with progress. The paths all amalgamate here: brick to lawn; past to future; teaching to learning; responsibility to freedom; institution to world. Mary Washington affords each student the precious opportunity for convergence at every moment. As Frawley said, "more often than not, convergent moments come in the quotidian, as a kind of redemption of the ordinary. These are the everyday times when the past and the future merge, when our desires and our fears converge into a confident stillness and when, such as today, families and total strangers come together effortlessly over a common purpose. These convergent moments are energizing and hopeful."

homecoming spirit

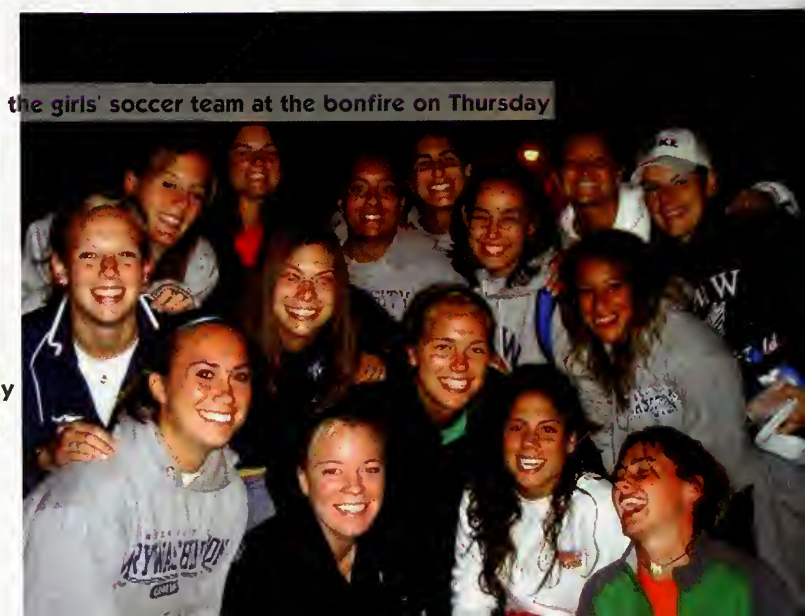

This year's Homecoming was a blast! With a theme of "Viva Las Vegas" and the slogan "What happens in Mary Wash stays in Mary Wash," the week was a tremendous hit for everyone. Homecoming week started with "Students Helping Honduras Game Night," "Cross Cultural BBQ," and "Rio Day with Volleyball." Thursday was "Rocktober Fest and Bonfire," Friday was "Crazy Carnival Day and Homecoming Dance," and the week was wrapped up with the sports games on Saturday. The dance and bonfire were great hits with s'mores at the bonfire and great music at the dance. The sports games brought out most of the Mary Wash community. This was extremely evident by the packed stands at both the girls and boys soccer games. At those games, the Spirit Committee had a giveaway with tons of free prizes for all, including UMW water bottles and pennants.

As elections drew near, students raised their voices in praise of their preferred candidates. The campus came alive with student organizations vying for the spotlight in an attempt to get their issues, and stances, heard. A debate between the Democrat and Republican clubs was the perfect venue for such an endeavor. The building was packed as students listened intently to the vast variety of issues that were covered. The topics included education, economics, the war on terror, and even some controversial issues such as stem cell research and the marriage amendment. In fact, the marriage amendment turned out to be a key issue in this election. The proposed amendment would not only prohibit same sex marriage, but also take away former rights from any kind of unmarried couple. This amendment would count abuse in live-in-relationships only as assault and not as domestic violence, among other stipulations. The campus organization PRISM made a strong effort to open students eyes to the issue by painting "Vote No!" on the rock in bold letters. As students walked by, some stopped to sign the rock to show their support for the cause. Other organizations counteracted by painting "Vote Yes" on the rock (as pictured). For those who were unaware of the proposed amendment, PRISM filled the campus with flyers summarizing and detailing the issue. In addition, booths providing absentee ballots to students were set up around campus. In these many ways, campus organizations were able to enlighten their peers on the campaign issues of this years election.

William John Frawley was inaugurated as the University of Mary Washington's seventh president on Saturday, September 30, 2006. The inaugural festivities began earlier in the week with a UMW and Community Symphony Orchestra Inaugural Concert on Wednesday, and concluded with an Inaugural Ball, held at the Jepson Alumni Center the night of the Inaugural ceremony. Keynote speakers present to greet President Frawley included Virginia Governor, Timothy Kaine and other local politicians. In his speech, newly inaugurated President Frawley, using examples of experiences with his own children such as "brainwire", spoke of convergent moments. He stated that, "These are the everyday times when the past and the future merge, when our desires and our fears converge into a confident stillness and when ... families and total strangers come together effortlessly over a common purpose. These convergent moments are energizing and hopeful." President Frawley discussed the need to drive the future, not to just ratify the past. In talking about an experience with his young son, he stated that "tomorrow is just like today, except totally different". We will maintain some traditions, but there is also change. President Frawley emphasized that we need to 'teach to the future', not for the present which is merely just catching up. We need to be cutting edge. We are the future of the institution, and President Frawley is promising to take us there.

On April 16, 2007, the Commonwealth of Virginia was struck with a terrible tragedy. In the early morning, a Virginia Tech student armed with two handguns killed two people in a dorm room and proceeded to kill 30 more, two hours later, in the engineering building. The University of Mary Washington campus was alerted to the tragedy via an email from President Frawley in the afternoon hours. Later, an email was sent to Virginia Tech President, Charles Steger, letting him know that the UMW community was praying for those involved in the massacre and that the UMW campus was open for friends, family and students of Tech. That night, a small, impromptu vigil was held around the fountain where students said prayers, lit candles, sang "Lean On Me" and poured orange Gatorade into the fountain. By Tuesday morning, "our waters ran orange for those at Virginia Tech." Thursday, the Commonwealth supported Tech by wearing orange and maroon, while a statewide vigil was held that night. Friday at noon, students, faculty and staff clasped hands across campus for a 5 minute chain commemorating the events. The UMW community held its own vigil in Ball Circle, with so many people that they barely fit around the grassy lawn. Everyone was given a candle and once again, said a prayer for those involved in this tragedy who will forever be known in modern U.S. history.

this book would never have existed:

A million thanks to a fantastic staff who really stuck with it. It's hard to believe this publication became a reality! I know this year was a challenge - with a staff of only 8 and 320 pages to complete it seemed impossible, but it's all finished! I wish you all the best of luck with next year and with your bright futures. I am inspired and impressed with the leadership you all mustered at the very end to pull together a great book. Consider this the actual last email from me! You guys are really awesome and a pleasure to work with.

Cheers!

-M.

First, I need to thank Madeleine for stepping up to the plate and making this yearbook happen, when no one seemed to want to do it. And even if they never read this, I need to thank my family for all of their support whilst I was here.

Thank you. I also want to thank all of my friends here at Mary Wash for all the wonderful memories which are seen in this book and for those which are always going to be in our hearts. I love you all and I will always cherish the times we had spent at Mary Wash.

Here's to our first last call as alumni!

-Jennifer

Whoosh! Its finally finished! No more stressing out about where pictures are going to come from or how everything is going to get done on time. Even though it was challenging at times, it was still a blast. I'm looking forward to next year and the creation of another great book. To all of my friends and everyone I stalked on facebook to get pictures, thank you so much! It couldn't have been done without you. To my special ex-Randolph and ex-Marshall people, thanks for the memories and get ready, your Junior Ring week is going to make up for the mummification of my car (RIP Bacardi).

Here's to a great upcoming centennial year!

-Gracie

I have to start by thanking Madeleine for all her hard work this year. You did an amazing job and we couldn't have done it without you. Thank you to the rest of the staff for sticking with it for the whole year. Thank you also to Clint Often for letting me bother him so many times for pictures. Lastly, thanks to Sree, my partner in crime! You kept my stress level down and were always there for me when I couldn't remember we had a meeting. Thanks!

-Alex

Thanks to everyone who really gave it their all this year. We had a lot of people come and go, but I must say everyone did a really great job. I can't wait to work with each and every one of you again next year. Madeleine, a special thanks goes out to you for all the hard work, dedication, and teambuilding you facilitated this year.

-Barbara

Sree! So sorry you didn't get your own message in here. Thanks for everything you did this year - we couldn't have done it without you!

First off, thanks a bunch to Madeleine. You made this book possible and have put in countless hours of work and effort. I wish you were staying on staff next year, but good luck to you! Thanks also to the entire staff who stuck around for the year. You guys always pull through in the end, even when its two weeks into summer break and we're still working on the book! Finally, thanks to Michelle, my closest friend on staff, who has always been there to offer her thoughts and help.

Enjoy the summer, and good luck to everyone next year!

-Cassandra

A great first year with it's many setbacks has finally come to the end. Thank you to all who participated this year, and especially thank you to Madeleine for pulling through in the clutch and being a great EIC. Everyone on the staff did their part and even went above and beyond the call of duty to do others' pages. Cass, thank you for all your thoughts and input, and of course, your constant jokes that keep me smiling!

Have a great summer and be ready to work in the fall!

Standing up here, looking out at you, I came to the realization that I sat where you are forty-two years ago. Which seems almost impossible. My older daughter sat where you are twenty-one years ago. And her sister sat there seventeen years ago. And as I thought of what I wanted to share with you today, I also realized that my granddaughter Maggie, who is now seven, and her brother Robert, who is five, will someday, hopefully, be sitting where you are. And I thought of this particular weekend, which is particularly appropriate for you, and at one level I hope you will remember all your lives that this weekend, tomorrow, is the four hundredth anniversary of people who believe that their liberty came from God, landing at Jamestown. They were literally entering a new world, and so is each of you. Because as you move from student to alumni, as your move from focus on learning to focus on doing, you too are entering a new world. Hopefully, your entry will be much easier than theirs. Half of them had died by September of the year they arrived. And I am confident most of you have much longer lives, with much less difficulty than they faced. But there are some underlying truths that are important, and I think the truths of citizenship and the truths of life. I want to start with citizenship because after all this is Mary Washington, named for the mother of the father of this country, so in a sense named for the grandmother of this country. It is significant in ways many of you will not come to appreciate for many years. The George Washington was formed in Fredericksburg, if you ever get a chance to visit the extraordinary new education center at Mount Vernon, you will see there how central to our lives George Washington is. And I think you will come to appreciate even more that on your diploma, you will have been associated with his family by having graduated from Mary Washington. We stand on his shoulders, because he was the person who insisted on freedom, who resigned his position to go back home when he could have become dictator, who was determined to lead a private life, but to serve his country. And from him every generation of Americans can learn much. In addition, here in Fredericksburg in 1777, Thomas Jefferson came to meet with legislators, to draft the Virginia Statute of Religious Liberty – a statute which begins to establish the right to conscience, and which begins to establish that America will truly be different from any European country. We are the only nation which says that our rights come from our creator, that they are inalienable, that among them are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That leads to two different things. First, that if each of you, as our Declaration of Independence asserts, is truly endowed by God, that each of you is also truly responsible to God. As you lead your life, you have an obligation to pursue happiness – a term by the way which in the Scottish Enlightenment which Jefferson took it from, meant the pursuit of virtue and wisdom, not just hedonism in the modern sense. And the founding fathers had a clear vision of citizenship, which this college and this university have lived up to through the entire history, for what will next year be a hundred years. Last year, you were in the top six of all institutions in producing volunteers for the Peace Corps – the kind of dedicated citizenship that does in fact make a difference around the world and that does represent America at its very best. But the pursuit of happiness goes far beyond your duty as citizen, and it occurred to me. I want to share with you very briefly five rules that I evolved over the years because when I go out and talk with students much younger than you when I was in Congress, I realized they didn't really want to know what Congress did when you're talking to seventh, eighth, ninth graders after they get past the fact that at least you are a change of pace and therefore mildly interesting, trying to explain how you write a bill was not on their short list. And as I thought about what did I learn in my life, what did I learn going out doing many of the things Speak Howell described, I realized that it all came down to five basic rules, which I wanted to share with you briefly, which I hope some of you will take and apply as you think about where you are going from here, what you will do, and who you will become. The first rule, captured I think by some of the people who won awards this morning, is to dream big. If you don't have the courage at your age to dream big, you won't acquire it at sixty. If you think about all the rest of your life, what could you do? Who could you become? And you are not prepared to dream big now; it is much harder to start dreaming big when you are halfway through your life. And the dreams you have can be anything. It's not dream big in the sense of building a giant building or becoming President - but dream big in terms of a life fully lived, dream big in terms of family, friends, relationships. But second, recognize almost in the phrase of Captain John Smith, who finally in despair said "If you don't work, you are not going to eat," because he had an entire class of leisure gentlemen who were happy to eat but refused to do anything. Recognize that if you are going to live out your dream, you are going to work hard. But I want to be clear about this – I have yet to find any successful person in any profession who gets there halftime. I find rich people who live off their wealth, I find famous people who live off their celebrity status. But people who achieve things, whether it's raising a family – which is a full-time commitment, or growing a business, or mastering an academic discipline, or being a good citizen, it always requires work. And that requires having to say no to many other things you would like to do. And I want to encourage each of you to have the courage to focus on your dreams, to allocate your time to living out your life, and to be prepared to pay for that dream in the currency of work. The third rule, however, is that you have to learn everyday. I am now sixty-three, I have written a substantial number of books, done a fair number of things, and I found myself this morning on the way here learning and studying. When I got here I listened to people learning and studying. And I would encourage each of you to recognize that the world is so large, life is so rich, there is so much around you, that you will never finish learning, unless you have literally died in your mind and ceased to be part of life. And so, it is important not just to work hard, but to learn as you work, to learn as you live, to ask yourself questions about your life, to ask yourself questions about your friends and neighbors. And in a relaxed way to realize that you will be a student all of your life, you will never leave studenthood, even if you may get a degree or two in the process. Fourth, you have to enjoy life. No one has the discipline to work hard and learn everyday if they hate what they are doing. I can't give you any better advice than to suggest that as you try to sort out your path in life, as you try to think out what you are doing, feel inside yourself, what truly gets you interested – I'm not talking about happy in the shallow sense, but I am talking about what is worth doing so you wake up the next day excited about the opportunities you are pursuing, interested in the things you are engaged in, fascinated about what is going on around you. If you find yourself deeply bored, if you find you have to will yourself to do things, no matter where you are in your career, consider seriously rethinking what you're doing. Because to do anything truly well, you have to do it so much that you can only do that if you are enjoying it. And so if you dream big, if you've worked hard, if you've learned everyday, if you've enjoyed life, I come to a fifth rule, which I would deeply beg each of you to take to heart, you have to be true to yourself. In the end, in a free society, we are the sum total of our citizens, if our citizens are truly willing to have integrity, to have honesty, to have courage, then the future for America and the American people, is endless. Then you are at the beginning of a generation which you will learn more science, create more wealth, expand freedom greater than any generation in the history of the human race. But to be that successful, we must have citizens who are true to themselves and who have the courage to stand up for the truth as they understand it, without regard to convention, without regard to peer pressure, without regard to the applause or the booing of the crowd, because great free societies are made up not by one or two large people, that's a dictatorship. Great free societies are made up by millions of individuals living lives fully, teaching their children how to live their lives fully, and serving as models of citizenship. And so I would close with this reminder of a song you sang at the very beginning. The closing line of our National Anthem is that "We are the land of the free and the home of the brave". And I would suggest to you that part of the lesson you should take from the University of Mary Washington is that her son understood fully that if we are to be free, we had to be brave. And that each of you, as a citizen carries that same burden and that same obligation as the father of this country. And if you intend someday to be out there, with your children and your grandchildren in here, then you owe it to them, as well as to your parents and grandparents to live fully a life in which you are seeking the best kind of happiness – a happiness of wisdom and virtue, and to be true to yourself because that is the only way to be true to America. Thank you and good luck in your careers and your lives as you go on.
